

Help Wanted: Prosecutors to Change the World

is a four-part event series in California that seeks to break down previously held beliefs that the most important job, and perhaps singular role of a prosecutor, is to prosecute and do so to the fullest extent of the law. Under that framework, a prosecutor is necessarily tough on crime and likely to hold onto harsh policies that have fueled mass incarceration. With few exceptions, this structure makes it difficult for a criminal justice reform-minded attorney to conceive of becoming a prosecutor. Without a shift in this mindset and leadership, it will be difficult to realize the systemic transformational change many attorneys and justice advocates seek and that communities most devastated by mass incarceration deserve.
